

PAPER & PULP BY US

Meet Clayton Steele, environmental manager for Clearwater Paper in Lewiston.

Clayton and his wife, Michelle, are the proud parents of son Peja and daughter Eva. His workdays center around making the Lewiston-Clarkston Valley and the surrounding area a healthier place to live, work and play. "I have participated in the development of new water quality rules that include updating the human health criteria, updating the state of Idaho's mixing zone policy, transferring the (National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System) permitting authority from EPA to Idaho, and updating the copper criteria."

Clayton also worked with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality to obtain a permit to construct the $160 million pulping optimization project in Lewiston. In his down time, he enjoys camping, kayaking, fishing and hunting trips with his family, coaching youth soccer and teaching math to elementary students.

"I really enjoy the outdoor recreational opportunities that the Inland Northwest provides," he said. "I have a lot of friends and family that live in Moscow and the Lewis-Clark Valley."
